School Site Problems Snarl Jointure Plans

Land Owners Decline To Close Sale

BROOKSVILLE — Pleasant Valley Joint School Board's failure to settle with three of the five land owners at the 50.8-acre site for the new high school here is holding up the jointure's building program.

The board changed its special meeting into an executive session at Chestnuthill High School last night to discuss this newest obstacle.

Before the closed session, Vice President Jerome A. Blakeslee read a July 20 letter from Eldred Township School Board wanting to know if the jointure will accept 49 of its secondary students on a tuition basis this fall.

After the executive session the board voted to turn the land settlement problem over to the solicitor, Russell L. Mervine.

The landowners have objected to settling with a three-district jointure because a four-district jointure determined the size of the site, Blakeslee said before the meeting.

Legal Problems
If taxpayers can cast doubt on the bond issue because of the land settlement procedure, legal problems may arise, he said.

Rhodes, Simon and Reader, the jointure's bond counselors in Harrisburg, will not recommend the bond issue until the jointure has title to the complete site, he said.

A further delay in building plans at this point may mean the project will have to be opened for bids again, he said.

Landowners who have not settled yet are Mrs. Minnie Hill Kunkle, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Bush and Mae Speer. The board has approved $900 per acre for the properties of Mr. and Mrs. A. Mark Kretzing and Mr. and Mrs. Henry D. Thompson.

Eldred Invited
The board agreed that Eldred should be present at its regular meeting next week, to be held either Monday or Wednesday.

Supervising Principal John C. Mills said that receipts from Eldred for tuition had already been included in the jointure budget for the next three years.

The board announced the resignation of Raymond Koehler, Ross Township, from its building authority.

West Hopes For Truce In Cold War

GENEVA (AP)—Western leaders expressed hope Monday the exchange of visits between President Eisenhower and Nikita Khrushchev will be the first step toward a long truce in the cold war.

The atmosphere of optimism created by the announced visits took most of the gloom out of the deadlock at the foreign ministers conference. It fizzles out in probable failure Wednesday.

While many leaders throughout the world acclaimed the visits the foreign ministers sought merely a dignified way of ending their fruitless 10-week-old negotiations over Soviet demands that U.S., British and French garrisons pull out of West Berlin.

Prime Minister Harold Macmillan of Britain, from his country home in Sussex, praised the exchange of visits.

Recent Deaths

Mrs. Eliza Eilenberger, 68, of 239 Smith St., East at the home of her daughter, Stroudsburg, died yesterday, Mrs. William Super, Page Seven.

Ira Elwood Bisbing, 52, native of Tannersville, died Sunday at his home in Hamden, Conn. Page Seven.

Mrs. Annabelle Lester, 73, of Gilbert St., East Stroudsburg, died yesterday at 1:30 p.m. after an illness. Page Seven.

Commissioners Oppose 60 Percent Assessment

MONROE COUNTY Commissioners yesterday passed a resolution opposing a bill before the State Legislature which would require every county to assess real estate at 60 percent of fair market value for tax purposes.

The commissioners said the present 35 percent rate being used here under the new tax equalization and reassessment program is adequate and sufficient for all purposes, including the floating bonds.

Copies of the resolution were sent to Rep. Van D. Yetter and Sen. William Z. Scott, both representing Monroe County in Harrisburg.

In their resolution the commissioners said "no good purpose would be served by having a compulsory rate affixed by the Legislature as the basis of assessment, but on the contrary, might result in excess expenditures by various taxing districts."

Savings Noted
It was estimated that this procedure will save the county as much as two days each month in clerical work needed to make out the vouchers and checks.

Involved will be 26 weekly and 12 monthly checks on the county's general budget and seven weekly and 13 monthly checks on the institutional budget.

Hall and McChesney, Inc., Syracuse suppliers of county recording materials to the register and recorder's and the prothonotary and clerk of court's offices, informed the commissioners that as of April it has reduced its price by about 13 percent because of increased sales throughout the county.

The tax meeting will involve the same nine legislative leaders who worked out the 4 percent program early last month as one of several possible compromise solutions to the long tax stalemate.

The 4 percent tax would raise an estimated 148½ million dollars in the biennium. This would include revenue anticipated by extending the sales tax to include packaged sales of beer and liquor, certain laundry and dry cleaning services, soft drinks and auto inspections.

In addition, the compromise plan called for passage of the 2½ million dollar bank shares and utilities gross receipts tax on natural gas companies now before the Senate and four million dollars through closing loopholes in the corporate net income tax.

Democrats also include passage of the 55-million-dollar personal property tax by the Senate in their calculations. However, this levy has important opposition among Republican leaders in the upper chamber.

It was still a moot point whether the tax might be brought to a vote this week.

"We believe we can solve our tax problems within the next few days," McCann said in his speech. The Republican leaders were not that optimistic.

Freeze Asked On Realty At 1957 Level

HARRISBURG (AP)—The Senate was asked Monday to freeze at the 1957 level the market valuation of real estate reported by the State Tax Equalization Board for state aid to schools.

The measure would in effect keep school subsidies for more than 2,000 school districts at the same level in 1960-61 as in 1959-60.

The Tax Equalization Board's figures for 1958 have created a controversy because of their effect on the formula for distributing state aid to schools. Increased market values generally mean less state aid.

Sponsoring the measure were George G. Stevenson (R-Clinch) and Paul L. Wagner (R-Schuylkill).

LAGRANGE, Ga. (AP)—A grand jury Monday indicted three Negroes for raping two young white women and trial of the case was set for next Monday.

House Raises Ceiling On School Aid

HARRISBURG (AP)—The House tonight voted approval, 169-28, of Gov. Lawrence's proposal to increase the ceiling on state-aided school construction.

The present limit of $1,925,000 was reached last year and hundreds of school projects have been postponed since then. The new figure for the coming school year would be $1,150,000,000. It would jump to $1,300,000,000 in the 1960-61 school year.

The bill went to the Senate.

The Commonwealth has put up about half the cost of school construction projects in recent years. Some $4 million dollars is budgeted for this purpose in the next two years.

Help For Disabled
The House also approved a proposed constitutional amendment giving blind, paraplegic and double or quadruple amputees exemption from taxes on their residences. The vote was 196-0. It now goes to the Senate.

The amendment would have to be approved by this and the next legislative session and, finally, by the voters at a referendum before it could become effective.

The House also passed and sent to the Senate bills that would grant state employees 15 days' annual leave of absence (196-9) plus 15 days' annual sick leave (191-4).

Connecticut Gov. Abraham A. Ribicoff, who is plugging U. S. Sen. John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts for the Democratic nomination next year, was pitted against Gov. Edmund G. (Pat) Brown of California.

Brown wants to be at least a favorite son candidate for the nomination—and maybe more. He is making motions toward trying to line up a bloc of support built around Democratic governors from the Far West.

In the Republican political arena it is known that Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York now intends to decide by Nov. 1 whether to challenge Vice President Richard M. Nixon for the GOP presidential nomination in 1960.

Rockefeller, Ribicoff and the other governors split the day up among work, play and formalities.

Breaks Seen In Deadlock Over Taxes

HARRISBURG (AP)—House leaders agreed Monday night to sit down again to discuss the tax stalemate.

Rep. Stephen McCann, Democratic floor leader, advised Republicans in a speech from the floor that the Democratic majority was ready to talk about the sidetracked 4 percent sales tax proposal. Rep. W. Stuart Helm, GOP Policy Committee chairman, accepted for the Republicans.

Rep. Albert W. Johnson, GOP floor leader, said the conference will be held Tuesday at 11 a.m.

The break came after Democratic leaders received assurances that all 35 Philadelphia Democrats were ready to support the tax measure. It was the defection of 15 Philadelphia Democrats nearly three weeks ago that sidetracked the measure on the brink of passage.

"We are solidly in line," chairman James J. Dougherty of the Philadelphia group advised newsmen after a caucus of his delegation preceding Monday night's House Session.

They received assurances that Philadelphia could have one of its Assemblymen sit on a conference committee which ultimately is expected to resolve differences between the Democratic administration and the Republican-controlled Senate over spending programs in the 1959-61 biennium.

Businessmen Air Solution To Stroudsburg Traffic Congestion

Seek Action On Thruway Construction

MEMBERS of the Stroudsburg Businessmen's Assn. last night heard a report on a meeting of its traffic committee with borough and State Highway Department officials relative to traffic congestion in the borough.

The discussion included the problem of routing through traffic through the community.

the Fifth St. intersection and the inter-borough bridge.

Herman Lax, committee chairman, told the members at a meeting in the Penn-Stroud Hotel that several suggestions were brought up which will be recommended by the Allentown office of the Highway Department to state headquarters at Harrisburg.

The group also learned the procedure to be used by the borough in requesting changes in routing. Lax said it was decided to let Police Chief John B. Tretheway decide what should be done about the problem.

Also discussed was the status of the Stroudsburg Thruway, designed to take through Route 511 traffic around Stroudsburg and East Stroudsburg.

Members were urged to write Gov. David L. Lawrence and the secretary of highways and enlist the aid of prominent citizens in a letter-writing campaign to speed the project.

Other discussion included the Sunday sales bill, four percent sales tax, "Sidewalk Days" and back to school promotional activities. President John B. Wilson was in charge of the meeting.

Reservists Return Home From Camp

THREE Monroe County reserve officers have completed a tour of active duty at Fort McClellan, Ala.

They are Lt. Col. Harry A. Foreman, Pecks Pond; Lt. Col. Brian B. Walker, Mount Pocono, and Capt. Joseph G. Soukup, Stroudsburg.

They are members of the 2091st Scranton Army Reserve School. Col. Foreman is commanding officer of the unit.

The group was assigned responsibility of conducting active duty phase of training for Chemical Corps reserve officers from various army areas throughout the country.

The Scranton unit was responsible for administration, scheduling, instruction and supervision of the two-week school period. Highlights were a live firing chemical munitions demonstration, weapons firing and flame-throwing firing.

Hunter Slain In Mistake For Game

TUNKHANNOCK (AP)—A 24-year-old Wyoming County man, hunting woodchucks in the woods at nearby Nicholson, was shot to death by another hunter Monday, state police said.

The victim was Egbert Koehler, of Nicholson, father of two. The other hunter, Victor Wilson, 40, of 1515 Thatcher St., Scranton, was about 85 yards away from Koehler when he fired the fatal shot, according to State Trooper Mauro Forte.

Forte said Wilson apparently mistook Koehler for a woodchuck or other game. The victim was killed instantly.

Wilson was taken before Justice of the Peace Cecil Krewson, Jr. here and charged with shooting a human being in mistake for a game animal. He was released in $500 bail for a further hearing Tuesday.

Koehler was employed as a laborer by the Great Bend Creamery in Nicholson.

Auto Plants Closing Down

DETROIT (AP)—Chrysler Corp. production of 1959 models has ended and General Motors divisions began shutting down this week.

By the end of next week Ford Motor Co. divisions plus Chevrolet still will be assembling 1959 models.

Last week the industry built 122,672 cars, off only a fraction from the previous week's 123,446. A year ago in the comparable week 62,846 cars were built. So far this year the industry total is 3,845,173 against 2,575,402 at the same date a year ago.

Interment will be in the Prospect Cemetery. There will be no viewing.

Reeves Still In Critical Condition

ROBERT C. Reeves, Shawnee-on-Delaware, was still in critical condition at Monroe County General Hospital last night.

He suffered third degree burns over 40 per cent of his body when a match he ignited in the Firestone Tire Co. Building, 308 Washington St., East Stroudsburg, set off a gas explosion and flash fire Saturday.

In spite of his burns, he climbed up a five-rung metal ladder from the tire storage pit under the store's garage and made his way to the street.

Ernest LaBar, Russell Spencer and John Dipiti, all of East Stroudsburg, rushed from a nearby restaurant and tore burning clothing from the manager's body.

Under Investigation

He was taken to the hospital standing up in the back of a truck.

Deputy State Police Fire Marshal William Hartmann, who was on the scene near the Interborough Bridge yesterday, will return again today.

Ray D. Cornwell, Citizens Gas Co. manager, said the complete stretch of gas main running from the Firestone Store to the American Legion, a distance of about 200 yards, will be uncovered today.

Cornwell said cracks discovered in the main, one next to the service line into the Firestone Store, were caused during construction of the East Stroudsburg approach to the bridge.

A heavy steel ball dropped from a crane was said to have been used by the contractor last week to break the hard surface of the street in preparation for grading and curb construction.

The group will also participate in the outdoor show at Ross Common Theater on Aug. 15 and 16 and will hold its second Summer outdoor show in the Courthouse Square, Stroudsburg, on Aug. 21 and 22.

During the past weekend, 13 members of the group exhibited paintings in the second annual Broadheads Art Exhibit, sponsored by the Wilmar Gift Shop there.

More than 300 persons attended the exhibit and purchased numerous paintings.

Stroudsburg and East Stroudsburg may expect warm weather with some cloudiness today.

Allentown-Bethlehem-Easton Airport predicts partly cloudy and warm with a high in the middle 80s for Mount Pocono today.

Stroudsburg Man Freed On Bond

CARL CAPONE, 20, Stroudsburg, was released from Monroe County Jail in $2,500 bond yesterday. He will face charges of rape and adultery in court.

Capone was committed to jail after a hearing before Mrs. Jean M. Davis, Delaware Water Gap Justice of the peace. Bail was set by the court.

$4,587 Payment

Airport Money Allocated

(Record Harrisburg Bureau)

HARRISBURG — The State Auditor General's Department on the request of the Pennsylvania Aeronautics Commission has approved payment of $4,587.67 to Mount Pocono Airport Authority.

The latest payment authorized by the commission brings to $24,069 the amount paid to the authority from state funds.

A total of $35,941.13 has now been paid to the authority by the federal agency.

The commission said that payments are made from both state and federal funds as construction progresses.

The project includes site preparation for a primary runway, taxiway, apron, entrance road and automobile parking area and paving all those units.

Another phase of the project is installation of lighting for the new runway and taxiway and obstruction lighting for the approach zone.

The new primary runway will be 100 feet wide and 4,000 feet long.

The existing runway, which will be retained, is of stone and turf construction the commission said.

Man Jailed For Parole Violation

GEORGE Harrison Burger, Pocono Lake, was remanded to Monroe County Jail for a one-year period Saturday by Judge Fred W. Davis in Monroe County Court.

The judge found Burger guilty of parole violation after he was brought into court on a non-support count.

Burger was found guilty by a jury on May 12, 1959, of obstructing an officer and had been given a one-year suspended sentence by Judge Davis.

Lester Storm, East Stroudsburg, sentenced to three to 18 months on charges of larceny of an automobile, was ordered to serve the balance of his term.

Judge Davis revoked his probation after finding him guilty of non-compliance with a support order.

Richard Storm, also of East Stroudsburg, was found in contempt of court for failure to comply with a support order and was sentenced to one year in jail.

Henry Willis, charged with non-support, was released from custody upon payment of costs.

Share Development

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Army and Marine Corps are going to share in development of the Red-eye missile, with which a foot soldier can shoot at airplanes as a hunter shoots at ducks.

Telephone Officials Meet With Board On Complaints

POCONO LAKE—Tobyhanna Township supervisors are taking a "wait and see" attitude about the continued operations of the Commonwealth Telephone Co. in their area since the firm has spent almost $20,000 in an attempt to make a more workable system for Pocono Lake subscribers.

The firm had a meeting last night with the supervisors in connection with a petition signed by 97 resident subscribers sent to the Public Utility Commission complaining about the service, or lack of same, in their area.

Officials of the telephone firm, A. W. Ryder, Hugh Carr and M. S. Baker, explained to the supervisors and Solicitor Charles R. Bensinger that their company had earlier taken over the telephone service in that area from Franklin Smith, and the firm had had complaints of poor service and had spent nearly $20,000 in correcting the workings of the equipment purchased.

The complete system was overhauled by a representative of the firm which originally constructed the equipment, and 23 days were spent in making the equipment operational, they reported.

Since the firm was willing to spend this money the supervisors felt they would wait and see what would come of the service in the near future.

County Board Backs C Of C On Crossing

THE STATE Public Utility Commission has ordered the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad to show cause why the Gravel Place crossing on State Route 45060 in Stroud Township should not be closed.

County Solicitor Leo Achtermann said the commission issued the order July 27 and gave the railroad 15 days to show why the order of June 11, 1945 closing the crossing should not be rescinded.

The existing runway, which will be retained, is of stone and turf construction the commission said.

Traffic Court

In another case, Monroe County commissioners offered to rescind a Mountainside ordinance in any way they could to keep the crossing open for use by cars.

They started by making arrangements to have a traffic count taken at the crossing on a time of a PUC public hearing on the matter. The date and place of the hearing are still to be announced.

Plunge Kills 3

BUFFALO, N. Y. (AP) — A two-wheel generator broke through planking on a partly finished elevated highway Monday. Three men who were pushing the generator fell to their deaths 110 feet below.

The complete system was overhauled by a representative of the firm which originally constructed the equipment, and 23 days were spent in making the equipment operational, they reported.

Dishonesty's Effect

Because so many Americans take a lenient attitude toward persons who "make a fast buck," dishonesty has become a major influence in the nation's inflationary spiral. This, at least, is the opinion of Norman Jaspas, president of a firm of management engineers.

Addressing a Baltimore audience on the subject of inflation, he said: "Dishonesty is a definite inflationary fact that, if eradicated, would make price reductions of as much as 15 percent possible."

The cancer of dishonesty is so widespread, Mr. Jaspas claims, that "it is one of the main reasons American business, though it keeps adding volume, reports generally lessened profits in terms of percentage of sales."

Insurance company figures show, he added, that American business firms lost more money during 1958 because of internal dishonesty than in any other year during the last quarter century.

This is a disturbing commentary on public morality. It reveals a flagrant abuse of trust. It reflects the easy attitude so many people have toward the padded expense account, or other marginal activities.

We've heard before of the philosophy that condones the "whatever I can get away with" attitude. But it took Mr. Jaspas to underscore the costliness to all of us in terms of inflation of the dishonesty at which so many people are inclined to wink.

Opinions Of Other Editors

Will This Study Be Different?

If the proposed state council to chart Pennsylvania's economic future follows the course of most study groups, nothing will come of it:

The council members will meet again and again. They will hear reports. They will conduct surveys. And in the end, they will accomplish nothing.

We hope this one will be different. Pennsylvania could profit from an aggressive, non-partisan group which had the ear of the Administration and the Legislature... a group composed of representative, respected members who have no special interest axes to grind.

It's a big problem this proposed council would be charged with helping to solve. Many of Pennsylvania's economic difficulties are chronic. There is no magic wand which can restore the demand for coal and bring back those thousands of mining jobs. Nor is there any way in which a study report can replace jobs in the railroad or steel industries.

The emphasis will have to be on ways to restore full employment in Pennsylvania rather than what causes unemployment. If the council is going to engage in long-winded, aimless reports without concrete goals, it might as well be allowed to die on the Legislative vine.

With the backing of the Lawrence Administration, the plan for this 15-member council passed the House by 183-10. The Republican minority failed in an attempt to attach an amendment limiting the governor's authority to select the members of the council. Under the GOP proposal the appointing power would be divided between the Governor, the House Speaker and the Senate president pro tempore.

This amendment merits another look when the measure comes up before the Senate. To be more than just another futile fact-finding group, the council will need the full confidence of the Legislature.

Give the legislative leaders a strong say in the selection of the members and council is supposed to attack is so vital, closer attention in the General Assembly where final action will have to be taken.

The Capitol is full of long reports from study groups which faded from memory. The problem the proposed council is supposed to attack is so vital, we'd like to see this one succeed.

The Pennsylvania Story

State Services Periled

By Mason Denison

Harrisburg — Heads of departments of State Government in Capitol Hill are becoming progressively more and more concerned over the fiscal state of the state since the beginning of the new budget year.

June 1 has gripped Pennsylvania. It is beginning to show up quite pointedly in some cases as anxious department heads, working without a budget or any idea of what funds they will have with which to function during the 1959-61 biennium, stew and fuss over whether to attempt to move ahead or stand still.

As matters stand at the present time it is strictly a hand-to-mouth operation, dubbed by some of the more vocal members of the Cabinet as "Operation Skintflint."

For example, the State Department of Highways with its vast and complicated construction and reconstruction program must conform with the budgetary winds now blowing — which at the moment are quite becalmed.

Many a road project in local communities throughout the state — of the greatest importance to the residents immediately concerned and an integral part of the overall picture — planned and scheduled by the department, has been forced to literally wither on the vine for the simple reason that the department has no way of knowing how soon and in what amounts funds will finally be made available.

A tied up budget ties up departmental activity and in turn state services to residents of the state, more quickly and effectively than any other single factor.

In the case of the Department of Highways, many a local project must now go by the board for lack of definite indication of funds available with which to carry out the program.

With the construction season soon on the wane, most such projects will have to be carried over until next year — or even later if funds are not finally made available by the budget-cutting Legislature.

The State Department of Public Welfare is another example. The ambitious stepped up mental health rehabilitation program originally mapped out by that department calling for an increased expenditure of some $73,000,000 has yet to be put into effect on the broad scale initially planned.

In fact, with no budget for nearly the past two months the department has been forced to lop off several million dollars for the biennium for the simple reason that it cannot put into effect its program, it has lost finally that much time and need for additional funds.

As matters stand now in every department, a mere minimum of function is being carried on with stop-gaps appropriations — appropriations which are not predicated on hoped-for budget requests but merely continuation of bare essentials or operating needs.

The fact that budget and tax matters are stalemated is to the credit of neither Republican nor Democrats. Republicans are certainly just as much to blame for their obstinate down-the-moose-squint at the Democratic Administration budget and tax program, as are Democrats for their dogmatic and blind insistence in having their own way, or else.

There must be a meeting of minds to prevent a serious breakdown in state services. Again, a continuous "little summit" meeting of the two opposing forces is more than in order — not the sporadic haphazard gatherings that have marked such past proceedings.

Man In The Iron Mosque

George Sokolsky Says...

Nixon's Prospects

In the United States, in the year, 1959, whatever a public figure does reflects itself in domestic politics.

For nearly every public man, in his heart, is a candidate for the Presidency of the United States.

Senator Hubert Humphrey took a trip to Soviet Russia, had a long-winded conversation with Nikita Khrushchev, wrote a magazine article on the subject and became a candidate for President. It is doubtful that the prolonged interview advanced his chances.

Governor Averell Harriman landed in Soviet Russia as a reporter, working for the North American Newspaper Alliance which takes on walls and strays to do pieces here and there. Harriman's reports on Soviet Russia made interesting reading and it is said that he made other confidential reports to our government.

Be that as it may, it rescued him from the oblivion which is the normal lot of defeated governors and makes him an aspirant for the office of secretary of state should a Democratic President be elected in 1960.

Vice President Nixon has the advantage of his post when he travels abroad. It is true that President Eisenhower sent his brother, Milton, on this trip to Russia to help Nixon who did not need his help.

However, Milton Eisenhower is not likely ever to be a candidate for the Presidency, although the President once said something about Milton having the brains of the family which may be true.

That is the job that is being done on Nixon, but it encounters a different situation, namely, that Nixon finds ways of displaying stature. It is difficult for a Vice President. He is a captive of his office.

There are many limitations on his conduct, including the necessity of avoiding embarrassment for the President. He cannot organize to campaign because it would be difficult for him to raise a campaign fund while in office.

He is like a fighter who goes into the ring with one arm tied behind him. Perhaps that is one reason why so few Vice Presidents have been elected to the Presidency.

On the other hand, his only adversary, Nelson Rockefeller, also is handicapped because he is bogged down in the parochial politics of New York State and New York City and both are very bad indeed. If Rockefeller had time, he and his associates might do a decent job cleaning up the very smelly administrative situation in New York, but by 1960, too little can be accomplished to be notable, even if the greatest talent were available. More likely, the next year will produce a plethora of scandals but the cleansing process is far off.

Therefore Rockefeller is limited to the classical and expensive task of a public relations — Madison Avenue — campaign against Nixon plus such deals as are characteristic of Republican politics. In the past, such deals have produced victories, as, for instance, the nomination of Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Hayride — The social directors of Onawa Lodge delighted 80 guests who made a long tour of the Pocono Mts., then enjoyed a Weiner roast.

Elks — The Elks Softball Team will play a charity game at E. S. Playground. Opposition will be the Tamaqua Elks team.

Explosion — London's wholesale district was shaken by a gas explosion which injured over 100 persons.

By the looks of it, Milton Eisenhower gained no political stature out of this trip, Nixon overshadowing him completely.

In Republican politics, Vice President Nixon has only one contender to deal with, that is, Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York. The propaganda device used against Richard Nixon is the same old gambit used against Robert A. Taft, namely, that Nixon cannot be elected.

This is being repeated over and over again every day, the same as it was against Taft. It is the Hitlerian propaganda device of the big lie, as nobody can even guess now who can be elected in November, 1960. Even the same words are used which I will paraphrase: "Nixon is a fine man. He has made an excellent Vice President. He ought to be nominated for President. But he won't be. He can't win."

The last man who told me that was a pompous but important lawyer, a traditional and one might say, an hereditary Republican. I asked a simple question: "How do you know?"

The creature spluttered and fumed and finally ended with the gossipy anthem: "Everybody says so."

This propaganda killed off Taft. I saw men vote against Taft at the Chicago Convention in 1952 with tears in their eyes, because Taft had been a colleague and friend. I recall talking to a man who in those days cut quite a figure but who now is somewhere counting his toes.

He was supposed to be for Taft and was so counted by both sides, but when we had our little conversation, he was twisting his handkerchief like a girl who tries to explain to mamma why she was out after 10 o'clock for the first time.

That is the job that is being done on Nixon, but it encounters a different situation, namely, that Nixon finds ways of displaying stature. It is difficult for a Vice President. He is a captive of his office.

There are many limitations on his conduct, including the necessity of avoiding embarrassment for the President. He cannot organize to campaign because it would be difficult for him to raise a campaign fund while in office.

Explosion — London's wholesale district was shaken by a gas explosion which injured over 100 persons.

A lie can have a strong appeal. And seem to meet a human need. And how secure that lie must feel. When it becomes part of a creed.

Looking At Japan

It Costs Money To Eat Away From Home

By Jonathan C. Brown

Kyoto, Japan — Nobu, my Japanese traveling companion, and I had to move out of our air-conditioned inn into a less luxurious one in the Gion quarter. Our air-conditioned room cost $5.55 (about 2,000 yen) per day with two meals. I like to eat.

With one meal and the Gion Inn was only $3.60 or 1,300 yen per day with two meals. I like to eat.

Here in Kyoto we saw the Gion festival which is one of the best in Japan. On its eve, Nobu and I saw all the floats from each prefecture and it was like Times Square on New Year's Eve.

After recuperating from that night we got up the next day to see the parade. It was very hot and all the floats were hand drawn and it took about five minutes for each float to turn a corner, but it was a wonderful parade.

That afternoon we took a bus ride into the back hills from where we were to take a boat down the Hozu rapids. Although the boat was too big and the rapids too small and the rain too hard we did have a great time. The scenery in the mountains rising 1,000 feet right over our heads made a very impressive sight.

When we got to the finish of the ride it was raining as they say in Japan, "cats and dogs," and we had to run a mile to the railroad station. By the time we got to the station I was soaked, having forgotten my raincoat. Nobu had brought his coat and was only half-soaked. When we finally reached the inn we hopped into the Japanese bath in record time. Nobu had a little stomach ache that night but I felt fine. I guess the Japanese food doesn't agree with Nobu.

The next night we were out corner fishing and were pored up the river in wooden dugouts with most of the passengers guzzling beer and shooting off firecrackers.

The fishing boats are manned by four men; the master wears a ceremonial hat like a black dance cap and handles the strings of 12 birds while his assistant handles four. The other two men handle the boat and the decoy fish for the ayu, which is a small tasty fish.

Comorants are birds about the size of a large seagull and are used by the Japanese to catch fish much the same as we use a fishing pole. The birds have bands around their long necks which prevent them from eating the fish that they catch, except the real small ones. The comorants have long necks and can swim under water up to 100 feet. They search for the fish and then bring the unlucky fish to the master. Although the birds are well trained, the actual training can be done in as little as two weeks. The birds live a long time, even up to 20 years.

The oarsman in our boat told me that the comorants are used to catch the ayu instead of hooks or nets because the comorants kill them more quickly which makes ayu taste better.

That night we got back to the inn, tired but happy. We were again soaked in the rain. They gave us a red lantern when we left the boat and the red came out in the rain — and after a while the red also came out on my jacket.

The Allen-Scott Report

Tougher Labor Bill

By Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott

Washington — The House will definitely pass a tougher labor reform bill than was recommended by its Labor Committee.

That is foretold by two polls, one Democratic and the other Republican.

Speaker Sam Rayburn ran headlong into this when he appealed to his Texas colleagues in the House to support the Labor Committee measure.

"This bill is fair to labor and at the same time has enough teeth to clean up corruption," contended Rayburn. "Further, I am confident the Senate will accept this bill if the House passes it, and that is extremely important in getting any legislation enacted."

But this argument was that the likely approval of the Landrum-Griffin bill will result from two contradictory factors.

One is the vigorous support of a coalition of at least 145 Republicans and 70 Democrats most of them Southerners. The other factor is labor's vehement opposition to both versions of the Kennedy bill, on the ground they are too harsh. The effect of that stand is to put the unions in the position of being against any reform legislation.

Speaker Sam Rayburn ran headlong into this when he appealed to his Texas colleagues in the House to support the Labor Committee measure.

"This bill is fair to labor and at the same time has enough teeth to clean up corruption," contended Rayburn. "Further, I am confident the Senate will accept this bill if the House passes it, and that is extremely important in getting any legislation enacted."

But this argument was sharply challenged by another veteran Texan.

"Why should we go out on a limb for this bill," he demanded, "when the unions are denouncing it and threatening to oppose us if we vote for it? Under those circumstances, I say we might as well support the stronger Landrum-Griffin bill."

Of the 22 Texas representatives at this meeting, Rayburn only got assurances of backing from less than half.

He did better at a gathering of 21 new House members. Seventeen promised to vote for the Committee measure after Rayburn urged that as "an expression of confidence" in his leadership.

However, Democratic Floor Leader John McCormack, Mass., got nowhere when he sought AFL-CIO approval for the Committee bill.

"If you don't stop opposing it," he warned the union officials, "you're going to get a lot worse. You are up against a coalition that is powerful and well organized, while we are split. I strongly advise you to accept the Committee bill, and then we can work out a compromise with the Senate that everyone can live with."

The AFL-CIO leaders would have none of it. They turned McCormack down, and are continuing to fight both the Committee bill and the Landrum-Griffin measure.

In the Works — A new compromise is in the making on the stymied issue of raising interest rates on government securities.

Treasury Secretary Anderson is working on that at both ends of Pennsylvania Avenue. His biggest problem is within his own ranks in the Administration, chiefly with Reserve Board Chairman William McC. Martin, who upset Anderson's original compromise with Democratic congressional leaders.

Nature of the new proposal to hike federal interest rates is still indefinite. But Anderson has told Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.) a plan will shortly be presented.

That's what Rayburn has told other House leaders.

"I still believe a compromise can be worked out before Congress adjourns," Rayburn said. "I assured Anderson we will give prompt and earnest consideration to any proposal he has. But I also made it clear that we are not going to give the Administration a free hand to raise interest rates as it sees fit."

"Congress is going to write this law and not the White House, Treasury or Federal Reserve Board. I told Anderson they are going to have to accept some safeguards whether they like it or not. He knows that, and now it's a question of what he can do with the White House and Federal Reserve. If they won't cooperate, then we won't either."

Behind that threat was a significant vote in the Senate Democratic Policy Committee at its meeting last week.

All but two of the party leaders opposed lifting the long-time 4½ ceiling on marketable government securities of more than five years' duration. This vote was taken at the request of Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon Johnson, Tex., who is against giving the President the free hand he wants to boost interest charges.

Try and Stop Me—by Bennett Cerf

Caskie Stinnett once let his old boxer dog, Punchy, share a bedroom with him aboard the Chicago-bound Broadway Limited. The Pullman conductor took a dim view of the proceedings. "Keep your dog tightly closed," he said, "so that dog doesn't wander down the corridor. She might bite somebody!"

"She's got teeth, hasn't she?" countered the conductor. Only after he had shut the door did Caskie realize he should have answered, "So have you."

Next morning, as he left the train, Caskie spotted a Pullman conductor and decided to redeem himself. Fixing the conductor with a level gaze, he snapped, "So have you!" The conductor looked blank.

Fast Between Us

by Bobby Westbrook

It's an open question which causes more fatigue: Mental or physical exercise. However, I have reluctantly concluded that my own muscles must have had more exercise than my brain recently because last night I was beat—and all without having moved out of a chair all day except to settle myself in another chair.

I can play 18 holes of golf, mow the lawn and do the ironing in one day without getting half so tired as when I've done some concentrated thinking for a change.

There was a lot to think about: The campaign coming up for Laurel Manor; the crippled children at Camp Daddy Allen; and then, for a change of pace, Dr. Flagler's dank and dripping caverns under Main Street. Thinking about them was pure pleasure, but thinking how to transfer that pleasure to you is what hurt.

Not while I was doing it, but afterwards, I could fairly hear the wheels whirling away in my head when I finally pushed the typewriter back. They weren't whirling away to any purpose, either, having come all unmeshed and were just spinning away by sheer momentum.

Which is one reason I tell such an easy prey to Rod MacLeod's bum jokes. "What's a highmist?" he asked. "Somebody who is married to two people at once." I answered helpfully, to a somewhat obvious question. "Nope," he said. "It's Italian for a foggy day."

I'd hardly figured that one out when he warned, sotto voce, "Better keep your eye open around here about an hour from now." "Why? What's up?" I whispered back. "You can't see, if you don't," he quipped.

He wouldn't be seeing even with his eyes open, if I'd yielded to impulse just then. Might as well face it. Anybody who calls me a lame brain today will probably be right.

The Case Of The Caverns Under Main St. Solved; Not For Settlers But Butter, Dr. Flagler Unravels Old Mystery

The mystery of the vaulted caverns which descend under Main Street was solved years ago by some brilliant detective work by Dr. Charles Flagler, but the solution only came to light yesterday.

Dr. Flagler, a careful historian, wanted to set the record straight. The existence of the caverns, themselves almost forgotten in the dark depths, was brought to light in Jim Riley's column in yesterday's Daily Record.

The column dealt with the Seignior building at 522 Main St. in Stroudsburg.

"Two stories deep in the building are subterranean chambers of safety that are reminiscent of the old Fort Penn days. These lower levels are only accessible now by rotting or rotten ladders and have long since been closed to the public."

"The original store building harbored refugees from the Wyoming Massacre in the French and Indian War," he reported. The "subterranean chambers" are there all right but they were not a place of refuge from Indians. They are the results of the famous flood of 1869 and the ingenuity of the owner of what was originally the Wintemute building. Dr. Flagler reported yesterday.

Fort On A Knoll
He also explained carefully that the building was not part of the old Fort Penn of pre-Revolutionary Days. No one knows the exact location of the fort, although letters describing it place it at approximately that location although higher on the knoll which rose behind it. The fort was a strongly-

Smiles Don't Need Braces For Children At Camp Daddy Allen For Crippled

The children at Camp Daddy Allen may need crutches for their limbs but they need no braces for their smiles. In fact, the representatives of the Monroe County Crippled Children and Adults Assn. who attended the annual open house for the official family this weekend wondered if perhaps a physical handicap might not be a spiritual blessing.

"Sweetness is the only world I can think of to describe the expression on their faces," one of the representatives, Mrs. Ruth Brown, observed.

"It's a sticky word but their faces weren't. They glowed. That went for the directors and staff, too. And for the guests, I might add, most of whom have been working with crippled children for so long that they've caught their expression."

To Mrs. Carl B. Rosenkrans, president of the local society and a member of the state board the effect created by seeing crippled children taking part in the normal activities of camp life, geared to their own pace, was no surprise. She has been visiting the camp for years.

This is the 19th year for the camp located on 100 acres of land in Pike County provided by the Department of Forests and Waters. There are 50 buildings in the camp, and the rental amounts to 20 cents per night per person. That is one of the reasons why the camp is able to provide a program for $90 per child a half session or $175 for the entire season. A similar program in normal camps might cost as much as $600 a season.

Another reason the Crippled Children's and Adults Assn. of Pennsylvania is able to provide camping experience for so many children each summer in this and another camp is that 76 per cent of the proceeds from Easter Seals go to help pay for these children's camp life.

Each county is allotted a quota. For Monroe County the three children shown in the picture (above left) and a previous camper, Rose Bossett, have shared in the experience.

Each group of guests were given a camp guide for a guide when they arrived in Camp on Sunday morning. To the local group, which included Leslie B. Carlton, photographer, was assigned bright-faced, eight-year-old Tommy. Even with his brace, he was able to negotiate the trails and guide them to all the important parts of interest.

In fact, he would have missed his own lunch time in his pride at his "assignment" if his wife guests hadn't noticed the other children eating and pleaded fatigue themselves.

They were guests at dinner in the dining hall, hung with signs from the cabins from past years. Those names ranged from "Prisoner's Paradise" to "The Onion Patch". This year they have a "Dog Patch" "Juke Box", "Tool Box" among the cabins in the four units which comprise the camp.

The group visited the council area where programs, chapel and other activities are centered.

tered. It is surrounded by totem poles, one for each year of the camp's existence, with the 19th totem pole still being worked on in the craft shop.

Excerpts From Daddy Allen Camp Paper

I think one of the most beautiful places in camp is the vesper spot because it is different than our churches at home. There are pine needles for the floor, the trees for the wall and the treetops for the roof. Then there is also an opening to let in light but it is not only to let light in for if you take a look you will see a picture.

—Mary Kennedy

The ages of the children range from 6 to 16 and the camp can accommodate 100 children, who stay for varying periods from two weeks to the full season. The program follows regular camp procedure with crafts, swimming, nature study and sports—all geared to the pace of the children themselves.

All children take part in all activities to the limit of their capacities. In all activities there is an emphasis on their therapeutic value. There is a nurse and physical therapist to direct their activities.

Even their songs were motion songs, designed to encourage the use of hands or legs for children who may be suffering from cerebral palsy, from paralysis, from physical birth defects. But not from courage. Using the buddy system, they swam, dived for pennies and had races across the pool.

The director of the camp, John Kashuta, has been at the camp for 18 of its 19 years, although he is now only 28. He came first as a camper, progressed to junior counselor, then senior, and finally director. He is the head of the music department of the Lancaster schools and directed the counselors in a program of songs for guests and the children, who gave them a rousing ovation.

The children are still talking about their Christmas party on July 25, one of the two big special days of the season when they have a Christmas tree, hang up their stockings and exchange gifts. A circus day in August is the big event for that month. But all days are big days for handicapped children who are discovering that despite their handicap, they can share in camp life.

ECHOES OF PAST YEARS' PLEASURES are the signs hanging in the dining room at Camp Daddy Allen. Each sign represents the name of a cabin selected by the children for one of the 18 summers the camp has provided outdoor activity, physical therapy and fun and fellowship for crippled children between the ages of 6 and 16. ## Jiggers, The Cops! Bad Way To Teach Children Ethics

By Dorothy V. Whipple, M.D.

AP Newsfeatures
"Watch out, the cops will get you," said Dad sternly to 4-year-old Freddy. "Better put it back quick."

Freddy turned toward Dad, fear sweeping across his round little face. He put the hammer back in the tool box.

"What would the cop do to me, Daddy," he whispered. "Cops put boys in jail—boys who take things that don't belong to them," said Dad very seriously.

"What's jail?" asked the child. "It's a place for bad people. They lock you up and don't give you anything but bread and water to eat."

"Could I have toys?" "I should say not, it's no fun in jail, no toys and no friends. Most of the time you are all by yourself in jail."

"Jail wouldn't be nice." "No, indeed; you'd better be good, then you won't have to go to jail."

Cop Complex
A few days later Freddy went to the store with his mother. On the way they saw a policeman walking down the street. Freddy hid behind his mother and hung tight to her skirt. Finally they passed the officer and Freddy said with evident relief:

"He didn't see me, Mommie." "Who didn't see you?" "The cop," said the child. "He might take me to jail if he saw me."

This is certainly no way for a child to feel about an officer of the law. And yet many a youngster is brought up to be frightened of policemen, to feel that they are strong, stern men ready and anxious to punish little children.

It seems to me there are two unfortunate results of using the police and the law as threats to make a child behave.

Junior Ethics
The first is the moral one. We want our children to grow up with a set of ethics that are as much a part of them as the air they breathe. We do not want them to steal or lie or cheat, not because of fear of being

Working as I do in advertising, I naturally think about this subject much of the time. I read ads that other stores and newspapers run . . . I often question my family and friends as to what it was in an ad that made them buy . . . and I watch the way commercials are handled on television.

As a result I have, of course, drawn some conclusions. I have found that nothing appeals to the reader like the simple statement of a truth. After chatting with some of our purchasers of Sharps candy during our promotion of last weekend, I discovered that the very statements I had inserted into my column, believing they would appeal, are the very things that did ring up sales: namely, that it is easy to eat—even though the customer may wear dentures; that, since it contains milk, it is wholesome for the children; and that, being nutritious as well as a delicious treat, even one piece will take the edge off of mid-meal misery for the dieter. All of these statements appealed to the readers of our Wyckoff column . . . and they helped our demonstrator sell candy. But because they were truthful and sincere, they will bring back customers who will buy time and again.

There was another big sales-grabber in my column, radio program, store ads, and radio spots: the fact that Sharps are confectioners by appointment to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II. This is what is generally known as "snob appeal." Countless average people who work for a living and can only dream of yachts . . . precious jewels . . . dazzling parties . . . and mink coats . . . enjoy knowing there are some things, enjoyed by the rich and the mighty, that are not beyond their own reach. It is a normal reaction, healthy reaction. If all of us were not reaching for the stars, there would have been little hope of ever lifting man from his original cave dwelling to a place on the heights.

Often times many of us are inclined to scoff and say we are not impressed by royalty and such. Yet when we go to England (if ever we do) we lurk around the palace for the changing of the guard . . . and peer through the gate, hoping the Queen will come riding by and perhaps lift a daintily gloved hand. Remember our Wyckoff Travel Bureau broadcast of last week, when Edna Brockman related the experiences of her excursionists in Canada? The biggest thrill of all was not the glory of Lake Louise, or the thrills of an ice sled or ski lift, but the sight of Queen Elizabeth as she continued her royal tour of our neighboring nation to the north. Some of the travelers even cancelled sightseeing plans so they might see her . . . and those who didn't, were delighted when they were forced to stop along a highway and wait, while the royal party sped past.

This so-called "snob appeal" is, to my mind, not really that at all. I do not think most of us desire to be snobs in a bracket above our friends . . . plunged suddenly into a life apart from theirs. But I do think all of us sometimes reach out to clutch at elusive excitements that lift our spirits, or carry us back momentarily to the imagery and happiness of childhood. In the case of the Queen, our treasured fairytales, no doubt.

Whatever the secret of advertising, people will buy, I am sure, if one is enthusiastically sincere in presenting a sales story . . . and completely honest, which we try to be at Wyckoff's.

One other conclusion I reach is that, if I were a business man advertising on television, I would NEVER ask a commentator to sample my soup, tea, or other edible. It is invariably done so quickly, indifferently, and even mockingly, it does more harm than good. However, if I were the commentator, being paid for my services, I certainly would put a little zest into the act. Instead of one sip, I'd drink a half glass . . . unless I hated the product, in which case I wouldn't try to sell it at all.

Often times many of us are inclined to scoff and say we are not impressed by royalty and such. Yet when we go to England (if ever we do) we lurk around the palace for the changing of the guard . . . and peer through the gate, hoping the Queen will come riding by and perhaps lift a daintily gloved hand. Remember our Wyckoff Travel Bureau broadcast of last week, when Edna Brockman related the experiences of her excursionists in Canada? The biggest thrill of all was not the glory of Lake Louise, or the thrills of an ice sled or ski lift, but the sight of Queen Elizabeth as she continued her royal tour of our neighboring nation to the north. Some of the travelers even cancelled sightseeing plans so they might see her . . . and those who didn't, were delighted when they were forced to stop along a highway and wait, while the royal party sped past.

This so-called "snob appeal" is, to my mind, not really that at all. I do not think most of us desire to be snobs in a bracket above our friends . . . plunged suddenly into a life apart from theirs. But I do think all of us sometimes reach out to clutch at elusive excitements that lift our spirits, or carry us back momentarily to the imagery and happiness of childhood. In the case of the Queen, our treasured fairytales, no doubt.

Whatever the secret of advertising, people will buy, I am sure, if one is enthusiastically sincere in presenting a sales story . . . and completely honest, which we try to be at Wyckoff's.

One other conclusion I reach is that, if I were a business man advertising on television, I would NEVER ask a commentator to sample my soup, tea, or other edible. It is invariably done so quickly, indifferently, and even mockingly, it does more harm than good. However, if I were the commentator, being paid for my services, I certainly would put a little zest into the act. Instead of one sip, I'd drink a half glass . . . unless I hated the product, in which case I wouldn't try to sell it at all.

EVEN the legendary William Tell might have trouble competing against the champion archers from the towns of Gubbio and San Sepolcro in Italy. The bowmen of Gubbio and San Sepolcro meet every year in a shooting contest right out of the Middle Ages. Cheered on by costumed fellow residents, the sharpshooters use their crossbows to hurl heavy arrows at a bull's-eye 100 feet away. The bull's-eye is an inch-and-a-half in diameter. With blaring trumpets, fluttering banners and colorful medieval garb, the towns hold their annual spectacle in an atmosphere of gaiety and excitement. This year the San Sepolcro men won the title.

Liquor Bill Passes By Single Vote

A BILL authorizing the Liquor Control Board to issue retail licenses to airport restaurants, without regard for quota restrictions in which the restaurant is located, was passed in the Senate by one vote.

The bill was previously defeated in the House where it originated, but a later vote passed it 182-62, June 1.

Rep. Reidenbach and Needham, Lackawanna Democrats, Musto (D-Luzerne) and Jump (R-Luzerne) were sponsors of the bill.

Philadelphia Democrats voted against it accounting for the narrow margin by which the bill was passed. Airports in the Philadelphia area already have licensed restaurants, and it seems that Democrats from the area did not desire to have the same privilege extended to other airports.

Sponsors of the bill were presumably considering the Scranton Airport but the Allentown-Bethlehem-Easton Airport has previously sought similar legislation.

A spokesman said the Russian Premier "should be taken to Philadelphia to let him see where this great country of ours got its start. We want the Russian leader not only to see the Liberty Bell and Independence Hall but also how the people of Philadelphia live."

Second Game Goes To AL Bitterness Stays With Promoters

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Yogi Berra's two-run homer powered the American League to a 5-3 victory over the National League Monday in the 27th All-Star game featured by five four-baggers.

Rocky Colavito, Cleveland's slugging outfielder, and Frank Malzone, Boston third baseman, also hit home runs for the Americans while Frank Robinson of Cincinnati and Junior Gilliam of Los Angeles connected for the National.

A paid attendance of 54,982 highly partisan fans sat silently throughout most of the two-hour and 42 minute game, an unprecedented second All-Star contest in the same season. They had a chance to cheer in the last half of the ninth when Robinson opened with a single, his third hit, and Wally Moon coaxed a walk from Cal McLish. The veteran Cleveland right-hander, however, choked off the last threat by disposing of the next three batters without a ball leaving the infield.

Limited Hits
Jerry Walker, first of five American League pitchers who limited the National League sluggers to half a dozen hits, was credited with the victory the first time he ever appeared in an All-Star classic.

The 20-year-old Baltimore right-hander hauled the first three innings, allowing two hits and one run. He walked one and struck out one.

Defeat To Drysdale
The defeat was charged to Don Drysdale, one of the National heroes in its 5-4 triumph over the Americans in the first All-Star contest in Pittsburgh, July 7. The big Dodger right-hander was rapped for four hits in his three-inning tenure, when the Americans picked up their first three runs on homers by Malzone and Berra, the latter's in the third giving the Americans a lead they never lost.

Veteran right-handers Early Wynn of Chicago, Hoyt Wilhelm of Baltimore, and Billy O'Dell, young Oriole southpaw, shared pitching honors with Walker and McLish. Each gave up only one hit as the Nationals were unable to collect more than one in any inning.

Aside from Drysdale, the National League pitchers acquitted themselves nobly. Philadelphia's Gene Conley, who hurled the fourth and fifth inning, retired six of the seven batters he faced, with only a walk to Pete Runnels to mar his work. Sam Jones of San Francisco yielded an unearned run in his two inning stint. Eloy Fabea of the Pittsburgh Pirates allowed the other American League run, this one coming on a tremendous eighth inning home run by Colavito.

Successful Gamble
Casey Stengel, manager of the New York Yankees, succeeded in his gamble when he threw in six left-handed batters in his starting line-up in almost ignoring the Coliseum's inviting left field screen, which is only 250 feet away at the foul line.

Four of the American League's six hits were made by southpaw swingers, Nellie Fox of Chicago had two, and the Yankees' Mickey Mantle and Berra had one each. The other two, of course, were the home runs by the right-handed hitting Malzone and Colavito.

Two Pinch Hitters
Unlike the first All-Star game when he shuffled 22 players around like chess men, Stengel employed only two pinch hitters and permitted shortstop Luis Aparicio, Fox and Malzone to play the entire game.

They distinguished themselves on defense with Malzone particularly outstanding at third base. He handled seven chances as the Americans played flawless ball. The National, on the other hand, was guilty of three errors, all in the seventh to furnish the winners with an important run.

Manager Fred Haney of the Nationals used 20 players to Casey's 19, five of them as pinch hitters and one as a pinch runner. Only Gilliam, who walked in the fifth, was successful.

Cal Coxswain Now In Jail

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—Carrying an armload of textbooks, Ralph A. Udick, 21, coxswain of the University of California crew, showed up at the County Jail Monday to start serving a 5-day sentence for speeding.

Udick, a junior from Boise, Idaho, was caught going 75 m.p.h. on an Oakland Freeway June 10.

Municipal Judge Clare D. Horner, an old UC man himself, had promised to suspend the sentence if the Cal crew won the collegiate rowing championship at Syracuse. Cal came in fourth.

Exhibition Tonight
DEL CAMPOS will play the Olympic Keipers in an exhibition softball game tonight at the East Stroudsburg Playground at 6 p.m.

Attitudes Differ In Both Loops

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Casey Stengel trudged through a gauntlet of backslappers and well-wishers into the American League dressing room and shouted:

"Everyone had a part in it. It was a team victory."

Then he ducked into his dressing cubicle adorned with a basket of orchids and said:

"Sure, they were playing hard. Both teams like to beat each other. These players know each other and they want to win."

When a sportswriter mentioned that this season's second All-Star game was met with little enthusiasm in some baseball circles, Stengel said:

"Well, some of the players are pretty well pestered out playing all season. Many of the clubs are concentrating on winning the pennant in their leagues. But make no mistake—the players today were out there to win."

But if there was any prevailing attitude in the National League dressing room after Monday's All-Star game, it was one of pleasant, philosophical indifference.

Naturally manager Fred Haney and his troops would have preferred to invert the 5-3 score, but their defeat was hardly a grave enough matter to provoke uncontrollable tear-spilling.

"It was a good game," Haney said, speaking in a quiet, friendly manner. "We just got beat, that's all. We had a couple of chances to score and we missed."

"It's easy to talk about a game when you win."

Delaney Wins At Nazareth

NAZARETH — Jim Delaney, Easton, won the 50 lap mid-season championship race at the Nazareth Speedway last night. It was his first win of the year.

Dick Tobias, Lebanon, took second place in the race.

Next races are scheduled for Thursday night.

Replacement Named

NEW YORK (AP)—Charlie Scott of Philadelphia was named Monday to replace Florentino Fernandez of Cuba in a 10-round nationally televised welterweight fight against Gaspar Ortega of Mexico at Madison Square Garden Friday night.

Fernandez pulled out because of illness.

Manager Fred Haney of the Nationals used 20 players to Casey's 19, five of them as pinch hitters and one as a pinch runner. Only Gilliam, who walked in the fifth, was successful.

FINAL OUT — Dick Dishman, Stroudsburg Little League All-Stars outfielder-pitcher, is out at home plate in seventh inning of District 20 playoff championship at Bethlehem Saturday. Dishman was cut down on perfect throws from Quakertown rightfielder to second baseman to catcher Cressman. Quakertown won title and will resume inter-district runoff plays at Mahoney City today, facing Mahoney City, District 24 kings in state competition. (Staff Photo by Haase)

Wyckoff Sears' Frantz Blanks Security Trust

WYCKOFF-SEARS blanked the Security Trust nine last night in the resumption of Stroudsburg Little League action at the Stroudsburg field.

It was Freddie Frantz's game all the way as he struck out ten men, walked none and batted in all four runs.

Losing the game was Paul Albert who struck out four and walked five.

Wyckoff-Sears took their runs in the first two innings and went the rest of way for a breeze.

The box score shows:

Duck Hunting To Be Given Curtailment

WASHINGTON (AP)—Indications are that duck hunting is going to be drastically curtailed this fall and winter in all areas of the nation except the Pacific Flyway.

Government Fish and Wildlife officials and conservation authorities interviewed Monday gave that picture before starting a series of conferences on establishing 1959-60 hunting regulations.

There was a general feeling that duck hunting should be curtailed in the Atlantic, Mississippi and Central Flyways, probably through shortened seasons rather than reduced bag limits.

The picture was reported better for the West Coast area, where the outlook is that there may be more birds than last year.

Arizin Loses Aim On Pocono Court

MT. POCONO, Pa. (AP)—Paul Arizin, basketball star for the Philadelphia Warriors, and the Philadelphia Eagles' Chuck Bednarik were at the Kittatinny Camp in this resort area for the first of three basketball clinics they are staging.

Arizin started to demonstrate the line drive shots that have made him famous, but he found he couldn't get the ball in the basket. His shots were too low.

The secret behind his embarrassing lack of success came out later. Some campers stole out on the court the night before and raised the basket two inches.

Hickey Gets Tatum's Post

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)—Assistant Coach Jim Hickey Monday was given a three-year contract as head football coach of the University of North Carolina, succeeding the late Jim Tatum.

No salary was announced for the 39-year-old Hickey, a native of Springfield, Pa. He joined Tatum as an offensive coach three years ago when Tatum gave up his position at the University of Maryland to return to his alma mater.

Tatum died last Thursday night from an overwhelming virus which attacked his vital organs.

Compulsory Inoculation Bill Doomed

HARRISBURG (AP) — Legislation that would make anti-polio vaccinations compulsory for school children apparently is dead.

House and administration officials are opposed at this time to the legislation which was introduced last Jan. 20.

Rep. H. J. Maxwell (D-Westmoreland) said he doesn't think his Public Health and Sanitation Committee will act on the bill.

He said local health units and doctors have been doing a good job with vaccination programs.

"If they weren't doing anything, then I'd say 'Yes, let's make immunization compulsory.'"

Maxwell, a dentist, also said there was widespread opposition to compulsory inoculation.

Wilbur Hopetel

Dr. Charles L. Wilbur, secretary of health, expressed hope that "popular education" would induce persons to receive anti-polio protection.

"It is hard to legislate for the pre-school age child and that's where we had 70 per cent of our cases last year," said Dr. Wilbur. "We find that parents of the children in this age group are bringing their children in anyhow."

Dr. W. D. Schrack Jr., chief of the Communicable Disease Bureau, said that since the immunization campaign began in the latter part of 1955, more than 15 million doses of vaccine have been used in Pennsylvania, enough to provide three shots for nearly half of the state's 11,100,000 citizens of all ages.

He said that 15 polio cases, two of them fatal, have been reported in Pennsylvania this year. Last year, he said, there were 126 cases with eight deaths.

Fire Damages Bangor Shed

BANGOR — Fire partially destroyed a frame tool shed behind the home of Joseph Shoup, N. 11th St., at 6 p.m. Saturday, but firemen saved the main part where tools and children's toys were stored.

A cat tied to a coop near the blazing shed was set free by Paul Stenlake, then darted out of sight as firemen played hoses on the tool shed.

All three fire companies were at the scene. Firemen said that while the blaze appeared to have started inside the structure, the cause was not determined.
